Some people should not be vaccinated. Contraindications include severe allergy to any vaccine component and having a moderate or severe illness at time of vaccination. Talk to a doctor before vaccination if you are allergic to any vaccine component, have ever had an allergic reaction to a vaccine, or have ever developed Guillain-Barré syndrome, a severe paralytic illness. The most common side effect of a flu shot is soreness at the injection site, which can last up to two days but does not usually affect an individual's ability to perform normal daily activities. However, there are rare cases in which recipients report persistent arm pain. Less common side effects include allergic reactions and Guillain-Barré syndrome (GBS). Life-threatening allergic reactions, which usually occur immediately, are rare but possible in individuals allergic to any vaccine component. Should you have a severe allergic reaction to the flu vaccine, epinephrine may be administered and Emergency Medical Services may be called to the scene. Also, in the rare event that a needle stick injury occurs, you may be contacted about recommended follow up procedures.
